

CAROLINWEHRMANN

Carolin Wehrmann is considered one of the world's most influential contemporary painters of seascapes and aquatic scenes. Born in 1959 in the Rhineland, Germany, she painted in oils for the first time at the age of 12. On graduating from Düsseldorf's Goethe Gymnasium she first studied law in Cologne, only to take up her true calling three years on when she changed to study graphic arts in Düsseldorf under Professor Kurt Wolff.

Her current glazing technique is the result, moreover, of profound knowledge of the use of pigments, oils and resins. By employing glazing she achieves this fascinating effect of depth in her latest variation of contemporary realism. The intricate nuancing of light and colour is what conveys to the observer the sheer exuberance of a world full of life and beauty, a pervading sense of atmosphere and infinite complexity.

For Carolin Wehrmann, the sea is an expression of her own quest for an ideal world and, transcendently, of her longing to depict pristine, unspoiled nature. In her water pictures she expresses the primeval desire to represent clarity and purity. Her works reveal her own search for greater meaning in the subjects she approaches. At the same time, the artist wants to open the viewer's eyes to the beauty and perfection of creation.

Classics and Reflections - a dialogue: The artist has developed the genre of seascapes and the subject of water in an extraordinarily consistent and intense way. While until several years ago her works were predominantly traditional, masterfully painted compositions of sky, horizon, water and shore - in the "Reflections" series she succeeds in significantly redefining the water motif. She breaks through the conventional boundaries between genres and in so doing creates her own, highly personal expression.
